The goal of this symposium is to study the way in which issues of identity and alterity affect and challenge our understanding of questions related to multiculturalism and social justice. The meeting will open by a keynote address that will be followed by an invited conference on identity. All other papers will be chosen from submissions in one of four sections: "conflicts","identity","alterity", and "solutions."

Each of these issues should be understood in a wide sense. Conflicts need not be violent, neither "identity" nor "alterity" need to be reduced to questions pertaining to culture, differences related to issues of health or age are also welcome. Finally, the question mark in the section "solutions" is important, suggesting that what is at interest are not only particular solutions, but also in some cases the absence of solution or the way solutions tend to be formulated. Four papers will be accepted in each sub-section and they will be followed by a response from a commentator.

The languages of the symposium are Japanese and English.
