

Session 2: Family and living independently in the community

Yang-Yi Zheng

The difficulties as a mother: The influence of media effect on Taiwan's female intellectual disabilities

Considering that intellectual disabilities are regarded as a group without normal ability and that's why they are not able to be "good parents". The image of "good parents" is widely shaped and complemented through various dramas, advertisements, and News media, and the standard is even getting higher following the flow of social capital. This phenomenon produced an obvious influence on the reproduction right of intellectual disabilities.

Among the group of intellectual disabilities, the female is especially the one to bear more blame in sexual and parental rights. Not only because they are the main entity of giving birth, but also because of the double repression of the female intellectual disabilities. This article is going to discuss the parenting right of intellectual disabilities, and concretely analyze the media effect of Taiwan's public opinion. And how these shaped the relationship between female intellectual disabilities and their parents, and further affect the production of social support.